PRESENT TARIFF STATUS.

Well Directed Revision Necessary for Relief of American

Consumers.

The passage by the German reichstag of Emperor William's special tariff bills postpones for a year and four months the tariff war which Germany had announced her intention to begin upon our products on the lat of March.

These bills authorize the German government to go on until June 30, 1907, admitting our products at the same tariff rates which Germany assesses upon im ports from countries with which she has reciprocity treaties. The arrangement says the St. Louis Republic, leaves our commercial relations with Germany in the same unsatisfactory and threatening condition which called forth the protest and the warning of the reciproc ity convention in August.

We maintain unabated the Dingley tariff boycott on German trade and Germany only postpones her threat of retaliation until another and final session of the present congress shall have been held and a new congress has come into Defng

Readjustment, for mutual benefit, of our commercial relations with Germany, and with other nations which stand toward us in the same position a Germany, was rendered impossible it the present session by the narrow, selfish and stiff-necked opposition of Dingley standpatters in the senate, and by pact between the president and the speaker to choke off tariff discussion In the house.

In the short session of next winter the Republican congress will do no better than it has already done. can come only from the Sixtleth congress, to be elected in November of this year. The issue so sharply rated between the interests sented in the reciprocity convention and the standpatters in Washington will necessarily, therefore, be fought out at the polls in the election of the new persons.

During the campaign Democrats ill, of course, aggressively attack the trade-killing excesses of the Dingtcy schedules, pledging themselves to initiate and support such reciprocity arrangements as will open wide the ports of foreign nations to American products and extend American markets in every quarter where a demand xists for our goods.

Moderate and well directed tariff recision to relieve the American conomer of the onerous tribute now paid specially protected interests, and to curb the monopoly taxing powers of the great industrial trusts is likely to be prominent in Democratic platforms and in Democratic discussion between now and the November

The protective system was not built In a day, and it cannot be tore down in a year, nor, perhaps, in a decade Discriminating duties and export bounties by other nations may make it necessary to approach with circumansetion the complicated task of cut ting out robberies of the Dingley act; but the task must be performed, and the Democratic party is ready to un dertake it.

One point in the tariff discussions of the year may be accepted as set-tled in advance. It is that Democrats of the west and south, while advocat the wise and conservative tariff revision, will not consent to the remov al of the tartff from their raw materials of manufacture so long as the tariff taxes them heavily on the goods and wares made from those materi
